

Sydney-based web developer.

Hi, I'm Duncan, a diplomat turned aspiring web developer currently studying for a Higher Education Diploma in IT through Coder Academy's full-stack bootcamp. It's been a long road to get to this point but I am beyond excited to have finally stopped asking "what if?" and instead to have taken the first step on my journey to a new career in tech.

As a diplomat turned aspirational web-developer, my journey to a career in tech has been an unusual one. But following a family relocation to Sydney, the time felt right for a change. With a long-held interest in technology, and a wish that my next role offer me some level of creativity, web development seemed a good fit. While making a mid-career change is undoubtedly not for the faint-hearted, the same sense of adventure that took me to postings as far-flung as Afghanistan and China ultimately led me to take the plunge. I haven't looked back since.

Through Coder Academy I aim to be industry ready by mid 2023 when I will be able to combine the transferable skills acquired over more than a decade in international affairs, with the technical knowledge that comes with a HED in IT, including in programming languages such as Python & Flask, JavaScript and React.js as well as HTML & CSS, SASS and bootstrap.

Away from work, my two young sons ensure the days get filled, but on the rare occasions I have free time, I love to be outside and enjoy photography, hiking, and mountain biking.
